University of Jamestown

Multiple Positions-Leadership Faculty

The University of Jamestown's Unruh School of Character in Leadership invites applications for three full-time open rank faculty positions.

In May 2023, the University of Jamestown received a gift of $15 million from Jim ('63) and Candy Unruh, the largest in our history, for the creation of the Unruh School of Character in Leadership and the renovation of the University's chapel, establishing a new Center for Faith and Life. The Unruh School of Character in Leadership will provide diversified programming options including workshops, certificates, and degree programs at the undergraduate, master, and doctoral levels, blending theory with practice. Courses will be available at all University locations (Jamestown and Fargo, ND, and Pheonix, AZ), as well as through the University's online learning division, University of Jamestown Accelerated. The University's leadership programming emphasizes the core attributes of a Presbyterian Christian education, including ethical and moral discernment, the search for truth, and the holistic development of self and others.

The University of Jamestown seeks motivated candidates who desire to help us develop leaders of character and to build our reputation as a leadership university. Successful candidates will be expected to teach graduate-level courses (in-person and online); participate in developing and launching a professional doctorate in organizational leadership; actively engage in research, publication, and workshop development and presentation; advise master and doctoral students; perform service to the university through committee membership; support assessment efforts; and collaborate across departments and/or schools at the University.

Required Qualifications:

- Ph.D. in Organizational Leadership or related field.
- Demonstrated excellence in graduate-level teaching, both in-person and online, preferably with a diverse student body.
- Promising research and publication agenda.

Preferred Qualifications:

- Demonstrated experience in teaching and research.
- Experience developing and delivering professional development workshops.
- Experience in assessment.

- Experience guiding masters and doctoral level research.

Please electronically submit a cover letter, curriculum vitae, philosophy of leadership statement, and contact information for three references to Erin Klein at eklein@uj.edu.
